This Week In NYC

The 5% NYC theatre admission tax was slated for repeal by the NY City Council after favorable hearings before the Finance Committee. Ticket prices will remain the same, with the estimated $2 million yearly being used by the producers to pay actors and craft union pension payments. Robert Whitehead, League of NY Theatres president, told an open hearing that the action would increase the volume of productions, aid in keeping marginal shows alive, help various sections of the city's economy which depends on theatre patrons, and bolster the drive to end the 10% federal tax.

Plays

DIGESTS OF CURRENT NYC THEATRE REVIEWS

From the Second City- Royale 9/26. 3 pro- Times, Herald Tribune, World Telegram & Sun- and 4 con- News , Mirror, Post, Journal American- filed on new revue with and by Howard Alk, Alan Arkin, Severn Darden, Andrew Duncan, Barbara Harris, Mina Kolb, Paul Sand , and Eugene Trooanick , directed by Paul Sills, presented by Max Leibman, Bernard Sahlins, Alk & Sills. All praised talents of young author-performers from Chicago cabaret theatre "The Second City", difference of opinion was on the contents of revue. While all eight received praise, most of the salutes as the most talented went to Barbara Harris . Affirmative side headed by mild okay from Taubman, Times, plus rave notices from Kerr, Herald Tribune, and Nadel , World Telegram & Sun. Times aisle-sitter thought at its best it was wonderfully fresh, pointed and witty, but when ills crop out it struggles and pants and produces little fevered gasps. Herald Tribune man raved for the eight brand new, bright, bubbling model entertainers, original, eye-opening and recommended. WTS reviewer cheered the first rate entertainment, polished, seasoned and nearly flawless, secure and scintillating. Negative voter Chapman, News, was a little less enthusiastic than the rest of the con side, he marked it bright, eager, clean, but semi-pro. Coleman, Mirror, approved of clever spoofers, but not of their dubious material, much of which he could not agree with. Watts, Post, agreed with several others who felt show was more suited for coffee house than playhouse. Post critic also found so much that is good that he wished it seemed more stalwart. McClain, Journal American, labeled it a spotty, near miss with occasional moments of hilarity, though often more forced than funny.

Choephoroi and Eumenides - City Center- 9/26-10/1. 4 pro- Times, Herald Tribune, World Telegram & Sun, Journal American- and 1 con- News- filed on second program of Greek Tragedy Theatre, Aeschylus' final two sections of his Orestes legend directed by Dimitri Rondiris, presented in modern Greek with transistor translation by James Dimitri and Helen Conn. The reviewers all praised inspiring chorus though they differed on individual portrayals, several noting that Orestes' portrayed by D. Veakis seemed miscast. Est - erow, Times, applauded rewarding night of theatre by the gifted company. Morgenstern, Herald Tribune, listed chorus as star with the two leads lacking in variety. O'Connor, Journal American, raved over spell cast by entire company that verged on fascination. Alpert, WTS, found little communication of emotion, but agreed the debates are timeless and the company's movement onstage was quite beautiful. Sole dissenter, Watt, News, was unable to summon up much enthusiasm for Veakis acting or that of most of the others.

The Thracian Horses- Orpheum (126-2nd Av) 9/27 3 pro- Mirror, Post, Journal American- and 4 con- Times, Herald Tribune, News, World Telegram & Sun- filed on new comedy based on Alcestis legend by Maurice Valency, pre - sented by Chandler Warren-William Boal, staged by Malcolm Black with Nancy Wickwire, Nicolas Coster, Louis Zorich, Thomas Barbour. Pro voters enjoyed play and players, while con voters thought it contained a promising idea not fully exploited , while two panned players as well. Affirmative aisle-sitter Coleman, Mirror, approved of capable and sometimes rousing performance, stunning performance by Wickwire and outstanding sets by Peter Harvey and costumes by Roy Diffen, O'Connor, Journal American, praised every - thing except final scene, which he termed ridiculous . Watts, Post, enjoyed pleasant and intelligent comedy, even though it is sometimes less brilliant at times than it promises to be. Negative reviewer Taubman, Times, vetoed it because the potentially amusing idea needed the touch of Shaw or Giraudoux instead of gentle irony of a scholar. Kerr, Herald Trib - une, panned script as unfinished and acting as bad, with sole exception of Wickwire. Davis, tabbed it spotty fun. Nadel,WTS, also found fault with acting, direction and writing. Script had been optioned 18 times in past 20 years for Broadway.

Misalliance-Sheridan Sq ( 99-7th Av S) 9/25. 6 pro- and 1 con- Journal American- filed on revival of 1910 Shaw comedy by Stuart Duncun-Philip Minor, staged by Minor with Donald Moffat, Frances Sternhagen, Frances Ingalls. Major - ity was unanimous in praise for entire cast and direction . Single dissenter found it too talky, the theatre itself too hot.

Ghosts- 4th St ( 83 E 4) 9/21 . 5 pro- and 2 con- News, World Telegram & Sun- filed on David Ross' revival of the early Ibsen drama, adapted by Carmel Ross from R. Farquarson Sharp's translation with Leueen McGrath, Carrie Nye , Staats Cotsworth, John McQuade, Joseph Marino. Pro side found it still interesting inspite of its age, and well presented though critics differed on talents of cast. Con voters, Davis, News, and Nadel, WTS, thought play too dated to retain much interest. Latter suggested a reading at home was just as sufficient as attendance at theatre.

The Opening of a Window-Theatre Marquee ( 110 E 59) 9/25. 3 pro- News, Mirror, Journal American- and 4 con- Times, Herald Tribune, Post, World Telegram & Sun- filed on new play by Gene Radano, a NYC patrolmen, presented by Bram Appel- Jerome Guardino, directed by Fran Malis with Olympia Dukakis, Philip Sterling, Guardino. All were mild on author, many suggesting he was writer of promise, and most approved of cast. Mild pros for script admitted author had much to learn, but expressed view that his slice of NY Italian life was moving and interesting. Cons felt script lacked form and tension, while Crist, Herald Tribune panned it as " I Remember Mama Mia" done in stultifying sincerity.

Fourth Avenue North- Madison (30th & Madison) 9/27. 7 con- unanimous- filed on new revue presented by Shippen Gear-Michael Battersberry, staged by Battersberry with Clint Anderson, Alice Nunn, Eugenia Hunt, Gerrianne Raphael, Sylvia Shay, Rory Harrity. Material, not cast, was to blame, all agreed. Inept, unfortunate material, summed Calta, Times, Conventional and uninspired, added Crist, Herald Tribune, No such street and let's try to forget there is such a revue, urged Watt, News. Alice Nunn did best for comedy, but not an outstanding voice in the lot, sighed Herridge, Post. What can you say after you say you are sorry, sings Alpert, WTS. An earnest cast failed to avert a disaster, concludes McClain, Journal American

THEATRE TAX CUT... Diverse editorial views were expressed by three NYC daily papers on repeal of the 5% NYC admission tax. Times is not persuaded that it is a necessary contribution to the theatre's survival, much less to NY's budgetary well-being. Problems that have caused so much anxiety about the theatre's future seem much too complex to be solved on any such facile basis; a good play can still make a handsome return for its investors; no succor from City Hall will help a poor one... Post editorial sees $2 million rebate as a hand-out to producers, a short range gimmick that leaves the larger problems such as union featherbedding essentially untouched. Afternoon daily urged time for more public discussion and exploration... News mildly supported the cut, but suggested to make it more palatable to the millions who never go to the legit theatre a cut-back in the 5% restaurant check tax to 3%... Davis, News, believes that in effect the taxpayer who attends the theatre will be paying more than ever before. With no cut in ticket prices and with the $2 million still needed, other taxes will have to be made.

SUBSIDY & OFF BWAY... Playwrights looking to either Off Broadway and/or subsidized theatre as a solution to their problems were warned of the pressures of packaging their plays so they could be produced in these special situations by Kerr, Herald Tribune. It is not the playwright's task to satisfy a single audience that constitutes no more than a segment of the body social. His true, ultimate task is to touch a rainbow of segments, a motley assembly of disparate minds in such a way to polarize them, fuse them, make them one in the excitement of many. This, explains Kerr, is the theatre's most peculiar gift, the gift that detaches it from a dozen other art forms and helps define it.

CRITICAL THOUGHTS... Six months is all that Davis, News gives the theatre if all playwrights were Becketts, Genets, Albees, Brechts... Happy Daze might have been a good name for Beckett's new play, notes McClain, Journal American... Sean O'Casey sees Red too often for Coleman, Mirror, to worry that he has refused permission for his plays to be presented at Dublin Festival... It isn't of the utmost importance to a biographical drama that its hero be a household word to its audience, points out Watts, Post, The play must stand or fall on its theatrical effectiveness.

DRAMA MAIL BOX... Central box-office selling tickets at regular box-office prices backed by Times reader... Herald Tribune reader hopes that the critics so impressed by Joe Papp's NY Shakespeare Festival productions won't hesitate to call him down when he falters.

HITS REVISITED... Camelot with William Squire replacing Richard Burton and John Cullum replacing Roddy McDowall is still one of the transcendent musical theatre experiences for Nadel, World Telegram & Sun. He first saw Lerner & Loewe show in Toronto. Entire company continues to play it like opening night, and the orchestra is splendid.

PROS & CONS BY TMK

Misalliance is a delicious slice of Shaw at his wittiest, launching verbal attacks at dozens upon dozens of subjects, most very timely, through a perfectly delightful set of slightly insane, but nice, characters. Inspired direction aided by a handsome in-the-round set puts the audience right in the living room with as charming a group of talented actors seen On or Off Broadway in a long, long time. Basically plotless and action-less, the perfect portrayals by the entire company make the three hour production seem much too short.

* * *

Ghosts is an interesting presentation of the modern classic, a notable addition to David Ross' one man downtown drama education. The two female performers Leuen Mac-Grath and Carrie Nye, plus John McQuade in a smaller role, present brilliant characterizations and do much to make the early Ibsen play exciting. But the two major male players are woefully weak, one overacting and fluffing the other under-acting.

* * *

One Way Pendulum is a British avant-garde comedy whose main redeemable feature is an ingenious "break-away" set by Peter Harvey. A bold imitation of You Can't Take It With You and half a dozen other comedies the result is an unfunny, pretentious evening. While most of the players were thoroughly intimated by the no-sense script, Carey Nairns as a wild and wacky judge was forceful and effective.

* * *

Choephoroi and Eumenides presentation of Aeschylus' Orestes legend by Greek Tragedy Theatre at City Center was fascinating from the historical and spectacle viewpoints. The brilliant churning and weaving of the 14 chorus members built up an excitement and tension that passed the language barrier with ease. The majestic set seemed to move and expand with their movements. But the lead players in both portions were not equal in style and technique to the highly trained chorus. The translation for the twin-bill was more effective than that for "Electra," but the recorded background music seemed out of place and meaningless. Nevertheless NY theatre fans must once again be thankful for the opportunity to see world theatre on W 55th St. at reasonable prices.

* * *

The White House entertainment by Stratford, Conn, players of scenes from Shakespeare this week is the highest tribute yet paid the theatre by a president. While Congress turned down his bid for an Arts Council, Mr. Kennedy in his own way is showing that theatre is an important American creative art. If it is good enough for Presidents and Kings, it might some day be good enough for Congress... Congress also has a responsibility when the time comes to insure that any repeal of the 10% Federal admission tax goes someplace else besides the producers bank accounts. A firm rider to a bill requiring either a 10% reduction in ticket prices or a 10% donation to the nearest non-profit repertory theatre would win congressmen thanks, if not votes.
